Academy of the Holy Cross

Washington, D. C.

A select school for boarders and day pupils, conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Cross, in the best residential section of the National Capital. The educational work of the academy is based on the conviction that intellectual, moral and religious training must be combined in the development of character. The academy endeavors not only to cultivate a spirit of refinement, but also to foster those virtues without which education of a purely intellectual sort can avail but little.

The academy occupies an estate of 23 acres, situated in the best residential section of Washington, and commanding a fine view of the city and surrounding country. The buildings form a splendid fireproof structure in the Tudor-Gothic style of architecture. All pupils are required to enter the physical culture classes under the direction of a competent instructor. A thoroughly equipped gymnasium provides for indoor exercise, while the spacious grounds afford opportunity for tennis, archery and basket ball.

The academy life is divided into three periods of four years each, consisting of the Academy, Preparatory and Primary departments. The Academy Department grants a diploma to pupils satisfactorily completing the courses in higher mathematics, sciences, classics and modern languages. Terms, $100 per annum. Catalogue free on request. Address
